August 17, 2010

Bloomington, IL – Addus HealthCare (Nasdaq: ADUS), a national provider of home health services for the elderly and individuals with chronic illnesses and disabilities, today announced that it will open an office in Bloomington to meet a growing demand for a broad range of health services in the area.

The move reflects an increased commitment to the region, where Addus currently provides home care and home health services to more than 100 Bloomington-Normal area residents. The Bloomington office will serve Livingston and McClean counties. Addus employs close to 30 home care workers, care providers and administrators in the area.

“Our decision to open an office here is based largely on what we’ve heard from this community,” said Agency Director Angela Adams Martin. “The feedback we have received from our customers and caregivers is that having an office here is more convenient for them. So we know that we can be more effective if we’re responsive to our customers and employees.”

Addus celebrated the opening of the new office at a ribbon cutting today with an open house to follow throughout the day. The new office is located at 901 E. Grove, St. in Bloomington.

Bloomington Mayor Steve Stockton commented, "Good healthcare is an important factor for quality of life. Addus is a national provider, and we welcome them into our growing Bloomington-Normal community. Many of our residents will appreciate the added convenience of working with this new area office that contributes to our well-being and our local economy, as well as the services that can be provided right in their own homes."
